The minority declare that another blunder was made in the report submitted by the extreme rapidity of the devastation, Senator Lodge, in which the conclusion was reached that "reduced fertility of land resulting in lower average production, or increased expenditures for fertilization" was a factor in determining prices of farm products. Senator Johnston and his colleagues quote from the statistics of the Department of Agriculture to show that the average production per acre was greater in 1910 than in 1900 as to every product entering into ordinary consumption, including corn, wheat, oats rye, barley, and potatoes. "Why did you come so soon after your visit to Beverly?" Mr. Griscom was asked. "Didn't you see Col. Roosevelt in New York last Friday? He will be in town to-morrow, too."

"I had to see Col. Roosevelt," said the county chairman. "There are a lot of important matters that I have wanted to take up with him. I have seen very little of him since he retunred from abroad."

"Do you think the views of President Taft and Col. Roosevelt on the State situation coincide?" Mr. Griscom replied after some hesita-

Has Nothing to Say. The county chairman halted for several noments and then replied that he guessed he would not say anything about it, because it was not in his jurisdiction. His manner was not reassuring. He said that he did not go very deep into the national situation with either the President or the former President.
